ANDREW HEWES

PREFACE

This little pamphlet has been written mainly for the children who are descended from the Hewes family. They and their children will of course have many other ancestors besides Andrew Hewes and his people, many who took an equally active part in the building of our country as those children know it. Many others who with the same pioneer spirit crossed the oceans rather than the prarries to find a better opportunity for their families. None of these children will however be able to sit at their grandfather's knee as I did, and hear stories of the earlier days of our national history which grandpa heard first hand from the men who were there.

Grateful acknowledgement is made to the careful work done by Mrs. Laura Sage Jones of Los Angeles, California who supplied much of the information on the brothers and sisters of Andrew Hewes and their descendants. Mrs. Jones is a granddaughter of Andrew's sister Mary Elizabeth (Hewes) Sage.

Staff members at the Library of Congress and the U.S.Archives have given competent assistance in locating source material.

Mrs. Carol Lind, genealogy librarian for the Seattle Public Library has given helpful assistance to the writer.

Mrs. Dewey L. Shultz, P.O.Box 875 Olympia, Washington typed stencils and arranged for the printing. I would recommend her services to anyone planning a similar publication.

Much of the information on the earlier generations of the Hewes family is available in the book, "Lieutenant Joshua Hewes," by Eben Putnam, Library of Congress Catalog No. CS 71.H892(1913). Many other sources were consulted.

All the genealogical information included here has been carefully compiled although it has not been thoroughly documented as would be done by a professional genealogist. I admit to the possibility of some errors and realize that information on the present generation of descendants is far from complete.

I would be glad to receive supplementary information from any of my "cousins" who can add to what is given here. Perhaps some member of the family will wish to undertake the issuance of a more complete and appropriately printed Hewes genealogy. If so the data I have will be at their disposal. There are many photographs available of several generations of the family but because of the cost of reproduction I have decided against collecting and printing them. They would add much interest to a more complete work.

I sincerely hope that this small pamphlet will bring to those who read it a small measure of the pleasure it has given me to compile it.

ANCESTORS AND DESCENDANTS of

ANDREW J. HEWES of POMPEY, N.Y. DELAVAN, WISC. and LIME SPRINGS, IOWA.

NOTES: The Roman numeral indicates generation number starting with George Hewes of Salisbury, Mass. as I.

The small number denotes the order of appearance of names in the text.

A + before the small number indicates that more is written about this person under the same number but appearing later in the text.

Andrew Hewes was descended from:

I 1. GEORGE HEWES of Salisbury, which is located near the mouth of the Merrimack river on the north coast of Massachusetts. According to Eben Putnam, author of, "Lieutenant Joshua Hewes, Library of Congress No. CS 71.H 892 (1913)", George Hewes signed a petition of householders in Salisbury in 1677. He was probably the George Hues whose name follows that of Joshua Hues in the tax list of Boston in 1687. He appears to have had a warehouse and landing place on the Merrimack and was reported to be part owner of the Brig Salisbury and was probably a merchant. The records of the town of Salisbury for 16 May 1682 report a vote of thanks to Mr. George Hewes for a bell presented to the town, and as a further mark of appreciation granted him whatever rights the town had in "Deare Island" in the Merrimack river near Salisbury. His son Solomon Hewes deeded the island to John Stevens on 17 March 1698. (Essx Deeds 13:300)

George Hewes married Mary Allen, daughter of William and Ann (Goodale) Allen of Salisbury. After the death of her husband Mary probably married Ensign Thomas Hart of Ipswich, this is inferred from deeds given by her son Solomon Hewes. On 10 June 1701 at Portsmouth, Solomon joined in a deed which mentions a meadow "made sure to my mother Mrs. Mary Hewes sometime of Salisbury". On 11 Jan. 1702/3 Solomon "Hughes" of Portsmouth grants to Ensign Thomas Hart of Ipswich, and Mary his wife, a lease for life of Mary, of land in Portsmouth.

II 2. SOLOMON HEWES was born in Salisbury, Massachusetts 2 Jan. 1674. He died at Wrentham, Mass. 27 Aug. 1757. He married Martha Calef on 28 Sept. 1700. They had ten children, the first nine being born at Portsmouth, N.H. between 1701 and 1718, the tenth child was born at Wrentham, Mass. in 1720. In 1720 this town was called Dorchester New Grant, later Staughton and Wrentham. In 1722 the proprietors of Dorchester granted him 650 acres called the School farm. In 1742 he deeded his lands to several of his children, (Suffolk Deeds 64: 169, 1 Nov. 1742). Solomon was a partner in the Land Bank chartered by the Colony and put out of business by an act of Parliament in 1741. ROBERT CALEF, father of Solomon's wife Martha, was a merchant and clothier of Roxbury, Mass. In 1700 he published a book, "More wonders of the Invisible World", which dealt with the witchcraft incidents at Salem in 1692 and helped prevent the spread of these persecutions to Boston. He died at the age of 71 and is buried near the corner of Eustis and Washington streets in Roxbury near where he resided and near the homestead of Lt. Joshua Hewes who settled in Roxbury soon after his arrival from England in 1633. It is not known whether Lt. Joshua Hewes was a relative of Solomon Hewes.

III 3. Dr. Daniel Hewes was the fourth child of Solomon and Martha (Calef) Hewes. He was born in Portsmouth N.H. 4 July 1710 and probably died prior to 1790. His brother was also a Doctor, Dr. Joseph Hewes of Providence. Eben Putnam's book referred to above, shows a picture of Dr. Joseph Hewes' house in Providence. Daniel and Joseph had some land dealings in 1752. See Bristol deeds 39,126.

My grandfather Andrew Hewes believed that a brother of one of his direct ancestors was Joseph Hewes, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. However, my research has convinced me that Dr. Joseph Hewes, the brother of Andrew's great-grandfather Dr. Daniel Hewes was the source of this family belief, a natural mistake. Joseph Hewes "the signer" was a merchant in North Carolina, having been born in New Jersey and educated at Princeton, Univ.

Dr. Daniel Hewes married Abigale - - - -?, they lived in Attleboro and Wrentham, Massachusetts.

Children of Dr. Daniel and Abigale Hewes:

4. Susannah born in Wrentham 23 July 1748
5. Abigale born in Attleboro 15 Nov. 1752
+ 6. Daniel born in Wrentham 1755.

Wrentham vital records show another son EBENEZER died 24 Nov. 1767 in his 7th year.

IV 6. DANIEL HEWES (Dr. Daniel, Solomon, George)

B. Wrentham, Mass. 1755
M. Sarah Cushman 30 Dec. 1778
D. Springfield N.Y. 22 Feb. 1846

His wife Sarah died at Springfield, N.Y. 13 Jan. 1836.

Daniel volunteered for service with the Massachusetts State Troops at the time of the battle of Lexington in 1775. The Massachusetts Revolutionary Rolls show that Daniel Hewes was one of the company of Minute Men which marched under Captain Jabez Ellis on the alarm of April 19, 1775. One of his enlistment records dated 9 July 1780 show him of age 25 years, height 5 feet 8 inches and of dark complexion.

He served on both land and sea at various times over a period of nearly six years from April 1775 until the winter of 1781.

On May 1st 1775 immediately following his service during the Battle of Lexington he served in Capt. Caleb Richardson's Company under Col. Timothy Walker until December of 1775.

From December of 1775 until July 1776 he served in Capt. Oliver Pond's Company under Col. Joseph Read.

From July 1776 to Sept. 1776 he served in Captain Ford's Company of artificers under Col. Brewer. The company was stationed at King's Store, Paulus Hook, and engaged in making wagons and carriages. On Sept. 15th the British occupied New York City and in October General Howe sent troops up Long Island Sound to attack the Continental Army, forcing Washington to fall back to White Plains. Captain Ford's company in which Daniel Hewes was serving took part in this retreat and remained at White Plains until December of 1776.

From February 1777 until June 1777 Daniel served on the privateer Brig Sally. He signed on at Providence, the ships master was Captain Lemuel Bishop. The Sally sailed from Martha's Vinyard on 1 March 1777, refitted in Martinique, captured one British ship and returned to New Bedford in June 1777.

From 1 Sept. 1777 to 1 Oct. 1777 Daniel again served with Captain Richardson's Company on an expedition to Rhode Island under General Spencer. This was later reported to be a secret expedition. Daniel's first cousin George Robert Twelve Hewes marched on the same expedition under the command of Capt. Cowell of Hawes' Regiment. (Other sources show this service during April and May 1777 and the soldiers were paid 1 pound, 13 shillings, 4 pence.)

In the fall of 1778 Daniel again joined an expedition to Rhode Island, this time under General Sullivan.

On 30 December 1778 Daniel married Sarah Cushman. This Cushman family is said to be descended from Mary Allerton, daughter of Isaac Allerton of the Mayflower. Mrs. Laura Sage Jones, a descendant of Daniel and Sarah(Cushman) Hewes, wrote me that she holds membership in the Mayflower Society based on the lineage of the Cushmans. Joseph Cushman who served with Daniel in Captain Richardson's Company on the expedition to Rhode Island in October 1777 may very well have been a brother of Sarah.

From 1 July 1780 to December 1780 Daniel served in the companies of Captain Crocker and Captain Tisdale in Col. Greaton's Massachusetts Regiment.

From August 1781 to October 1781 Daniel served a ships carpenter on the brig Montgomery whose master was Captain Hobbs. They fought a British privateer near Halifax. Captain Hobbs was killed in the battle. Daniel helped repair the damage done to the Montgomery which sailed but a short distance before it was captured by the British ship Maidstone. Daniel was put on a prison ship at St. Johns, Newfoundland and returned to Salem, having served about seven weeks on this voyage.

Records in the U.S.Archives show that he later served one or two months as a guard at Block Island under Lieutenant Isaac White and had some other short tours of duty before the war was over. At least five of Daniel's first cousins served in the Massachusetts regiments and in the Continental Army. George Robert Twelve Hewes being the best known for his participation in the Boston Tea Party. (see "Traits of the Tea Party a Memoir of Geo. R.T.Hewes," pub. 1835).

(See U.S.Archives Revolutionary War Pension Records, Daniel Hewes, claim No. S 13359 issued 8 October 1834 granting an annual pension of $48.37. Also see "Lieutenant Joshua Hewes" by Eben Putnam, Library of Congress No. CS 71.H892 (1913). For more detail see "A Sketch of the History of Attleboro", by John Daggett(1894), Lib. of Cong. No. F 74.A89D2.

Daniel remained in Attleboro, Massachusetts after the war until sometime in 1785 when he moved his family to Tolland, Connecticut. He remained in Tolland for about 16 years when he moved to Springfield in Otsego County, New York where he lived the rest of his life. He died there at the age of 90 or 91 years.

Grandfather ANDREW HEWES moved from New York to Delavan, Wisconsin with his father and their family while still a young man. He was living in Evansville, Wisconsin in 1879 where his daughter Evelyn was born. By 1885 he was living at Lime Springs, Iowa where Evelyn started in school. He followed his trade as a grist miller there, working in the "old mill" owned by a Mr. Salisbury. In 1912 he moved to Fergus County Montana with his daughter Evelyn and her husband Allen W. Chick, and their family. Allen had taken a homestead land claim seven miles north easterly from the little town of Grass Range. Here at the age of 80 Andrew again took an active part in the settlement of new country. The homestead was 40 miles from the nearest railroad at Lewistown, he helped to build the first log house on the land claim and soon after, the two story white frame house that was hopefully to be the home and headquarters of a thriving wheat ranch. A few years farming experience showed that this was not to be, the climate was too dry for farming and within 10 to 15 years most of the homesteads in this area had been given up and the land reverted to sagebrush prairies suitable only for grazing sheep or cattle. In 1921 the family moved to Winnett in Petroleum County where Andrew died at the age of 91. He is buried in the cemetery at Winette having remained alert and active until within a few weeks of his death.

It is interesting to note how personal impressions of the earliest days of our national history have come down to us by word of mouth. These stories are a part of our folklore, as distinct from the written history of our country.

The Boston Tea Party, the first skirmishes at Lexington and Concord and the long period of fighting, falling back, and fighting again that was the Revolutionary War. These were events of the far distint past. But let's see how far away they really are in human terms as measured by the memory of one man.

Imagine for a moment a Fourth of July celebration near Richfield Springs in Otsego County, New York in the year 1840. This years celebration is dedicated in honor of George Robert Twelve Hewes, now 97 years old. Born and raised in Boston, he has in recent years become something of a celebrity. He had been one of the small band of radicals who on Dec. 16, 1773 boarded a British ship in Boston Harbor. These men had dumped a cargo of tea overboard causing no end of trouble in the Colonies. He and at least five of his first cousins, including Daniel Hewes had fought in the Massachusetts regiments throughout the years of war that followed. Now in his old age he was to be honored by his neighbors. Long tables were set up under the trees. They were spread with the finest food and drink the countryside had to offer. Every few feet along each table was a small whole roast pig on a platter with an apple in its mouth and a small American flag stuck upright in its back. To young Andrew Hewes it was an impressive sight. He would be eight years old in a few weeks and with his father Otis and the family had come all the way from Pompey in Onondaga County, two days travel by wagon road to visit his grandfather Daniel and to attend this Fourth of July celebration. A number of the G.I's of the Revolution were there, most were younger than George Hewes. Andrew's grandpa Daniel was 85 and was able to form up a rank with a few of the others and to present their muskets in the Manual of Arms. Some had learned military drill under the stern personal instruction of "Baron" von Steuben who had helped to build an army while it fought the Redcoats. Younger men charged a brass cannon and fired salutes while some of the older boys fired a blacksmiths anvil with black powder.

Andrew watched the proceedings, listened to the talk of the old soldiers, and of course waited impatiently for dinner to be served. Places at the tables were not free, but Andrew had done extra chores for weeks and had saved his pennies for this day,so he was able to sit up with his plate when the roast pigs were carved. For an eight year old boy this was the perfect Fourth of July.

On another Fourth of July I sat by my grandpa Andrew's chair. Across the 82 years of time and the two thousand odd miles that separated these two days I heard stories of the men who beat the Redcoats. "Now when I was your age we had real Fourth of July celebrations - - - - -."

The 1840 Fourth of July celebration to honor George Hewes, first cousin of Andrew's grandfather Daniel, is a matter of record. Whether Andrew was there on that particular day is not certain, but certainly he attended similar celebrations and just as certainly heard tales of the Revolution directly from the old soldiers. His grandfather Daniel's home was nearby and he lived until Andrew was fourteen years old.

Listen carefully, you may still hear faint echoes of muskets firing across the meadows of Massachusetts.

INDEX OF NAMES

Roman numbers refer to the generation starting with I for George Hewes who was living in Salisbury, Mass. in 1677.

Small numbers merely denote the order in which the names of Descendants appear in the pamphlet. Names of husbands, wives and others mentioned are indexed under the number of the ancestor or descendant with whom they are mentioned in the text.
